In the House of Commons, March 4, the Marquis of Hartington stated that before the transfer of the talegraphs to the Post office the Stock Exchanges of London, Liverpool, Manchester, Leeds, Glasgow and other large towns were connected with the telegraphic system by Special wires, and certain factories were given to the members of such stock exchanges. The same advantages had been afforded by the Post Office, but he was not aware that the members of the stock exchanges had any other preference or priority over the public generally. With regard to the time which ought to be occupied between the reception of a telegraphic message between any of the chief district post offices of the metropolis and its delivery within one mile of the terminal office in any important town within 200 miles it depended upon the state of the wires and other circumstances. If in direct communication by telegraph, a message ought to be delivered within twenty or thirty minutes. With the system in proper order two hours would certainly be too long; but if there were any complaints it was desirable that it should be reported to the departsment.

Dreadful Murder in Paris.

A horrible murder was committed in the Rue Amelot, Paris. A carpenter, named Maillot, who occupies a small apartment on the fifth floor of the house, No. 34 bis, received the evening before the following letter:-

MY FRIEND-1 murdered my wife at three o'clock this morning, after a dispute about her master, M. Himbert. He remains responsible for our child. He is the cause of our misfortune. When you receive this letter I shall be dead. FRAISL.

This note bore the postmark of Montreuit, near Paris. The writer lived on the same floor as Maillot, who at once gave notice to the Commissary of Pouce, and the door of Fraise's rooms having been Poince, and the door of Fraise's rooms having been forced open a frightful spectacle presented itself. The woman was lying on the bed, with her head nearly severed from the body, which was mangled in an indeactibate manner. The sight was so shocking that a medical man who was sent for fainted away on entering the room. The woman had evidently been murdered in her sleep, and the man must have remained with the body for about four hours after the need.

evidently ocen murdered in her steep, and the min must have remained with the body for about four hours after the deed.

Fraise was employed as porter on the Lyons Ruilway, and was thirty years of age; his wife was a year younger and they had one child, a girl of eight, at present in the nospital. The woman, before her marriage, had been in the service of M. Humbert, and had remained on friendly terms with her former employers, On the afternoon of the day in question she had been attending on Madame Humbert, who was ill. The husband and wife had dined with their neighbor, M. Maillot, in the evening, and had retired at midnight, each in apparent good humber. Fraise was generally considered to be kind to his wife, but was from time to time somewhat irregular in his conduct, and would leave his work and his home for a day or two. This had occurred in the week, and he slept out on the nights of Thursday and Friday previous. According to his letter, pellousy of M. Humbert wound appear to be the motive for the crime.

No traces of the murderer had been obtained.

The London Telegraph holds that Ireland, as now circumstanced, urgently needs an efficient and skifful detective police. Her disturbers are not immerous. The divease which affects her just now is caused mainly by a foreign element; and the Fenians, who are restlessly endeavoring to prevent Mr. Gladstone's remedial learnslation from carrying baim and healing on its wings, must be effectually hanted down. This is the direction in which light would have been sometia by the practical and indefatigate genius of Thomas Drummond, rather than that wholesaie, induscrimmate form of repression which is attempted by the suspension of the dishess Corpus act.

The Saturday Review sincerely trusts that the result of the deliverations of the Cabinet will be that it will interfere in some electual manner to save Ireland from a curse which "is certainly worse than the incoming of a foreign army into the country."

The London Times says it is not its province to indicate what resource is specially required for the restoration of order in Ireland, but something is wanted to put down agrariants. "Perhaps a local suspension of the flateas Corpus act wound be more effective than a general suspension of it, if coupled with other provisions which it would not be difficult to suggess. At an evenis, the principle would be to make an example of the local-ties in which every law, human and divine, has been set at naught. The London Telegraph holds that Ireland, as now ASSOCIATION HALL-PROPESSOR MEYER'S CON-CERT.-A very brilliant, and, indeed, numerous, andience attended the grand testimonial concert given last night at this hall to Professor J. E. Mever. under the auspices of his pupils. Nine ladies and gentiemen, who had studied under Mr. Meyer, the New York Glee and Madrigal Society, and Miss Lina Luckhardt, a young and promising pupil of Mr. S. B. Mills, and Messrs, Werper and Mora took part in the concert. There were eighteen pieces on the programme, most of which were vocal and of the most trying character. We must here take the opportunity to advise music teachers not to bring out their pupils in public in pieces far beyond their powers. It can do them no good or give a laworable nea of their judgment or school. For instance, a duet from "Semiramide" as sung by Miss Hucchings and Mr. Brewer was such as would have driven Rossimi crazy had he been present. Also Miss Mayer's rendering of a tyrolienne, by Hummet, and "The Three Fishers," by another lady, could not be accounted even passable by even the most indulgent musician. Miss Luckhard, although nervous to such an extenthat one or two false notes crept into her first selection; Mr. Werner, an admirable violinist; Mr. Mora and the diee club were the most enjoyable features of the concert. It is indeed disagreeable for a critic to be obliged to sit out one of these amateur concerts, in which both performers and audience form a sort of mutual admiration society and the first principles of music are disregarded. We don't believe in listening to nascent products at them with delight.

The Reported Defulcation of Grand Army of the Republic Funds by Major A. F. Sears-His Arrival in Newark and Prompt Refutation of the Slanders.

A few days ago the local prints of Newark, N. J., contained elaborate reports of the alleged unaccountable disappearance of Major A. F. Sears, a member of Phil Kearney Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, and treasurer of a fund subscribed for the purpose of raising a monument to the memory of the gallant officer whose name the Post bore. The fund amounted to $1,000. Of this sum, about a year or so ago, fifty dollars was paid to the purpose of getting a bill through the Legislature relating to the proposed monument. The balance, $950 remained in the hands of Major Sears, and with a view to increasing it to $1,200, that gentle-

$960 remained in the hands of Major Sears, and with a view to increasing it to $1,200, that gentleman invested it, together with considerable of his own private money, in a choice piece of real estate at Woodside, a Newark suburb. Shortly afterwards the Major, whose profession is that of a surveyor and civil engineer, started for Costa Rica on business, and was gone some four months. On the way back he fell in with a good business opportunity in Wilmington, Del., and remained there. After a while he received the appointment of City Surveyor and Regulator, which position he now holds.

It was not till Monday that the newspaper allegations against his probity and honor reached his notice, and straightway he proceeded to Newark, where he arrived yesterday. He declares that his whereabouts were known all along to at least twenty leading Newarkers, and that no effort whatever was made to communicate with him regarding the fund, a misappropriation of which was never dreamed of. He had communicated with the author of the alleged false reports, Major Haistead, and demanded a full refutation thereof. He says he is fully prepared to make a complete transfer of the funds, increased to $1,200, to-day. It is proper to say that the Major has hosts of warm friends among the leading men o' Newark, who from the outset strongly discredited the infamous assertion made by the Newark papers and relicrated in all the New York daily papers except the Herald.

A Quaker Preacher Hauled Over the Coals-Brondbrim Confesses Intimney With the Opposite Sex-He Is to be Expelled from the POUGHKEEPSIE, March 15, 1870.

And now Poughkeepsie has a sensation. Mr. John Wood, a Quaker preacher, well known in this city, has been charged with improper intimacy with his servant girl, and measures are in progress to expel him from the church over which has presided for many years. He is between fifty and sixty years of age, and has been married only four times. His last wile died several years ago. A member of the church over which he presided, states that when Wood was courting his third wife his intended marriage with her was proclaimed according to the Quaker rule, and that a day or two afterwards an Irish girl appeared and claimed that Wood had promised to appeared and chanted that wood had promised to marry her. This little episode caused a postpone-ment of the announced motials, but they atterwards took place. The particular charge now preferred against Wood is that he has had intunate relations took place. The particular charge now preferred against Wood is that he has had intunate relations with his Irish servant grit, Mary McNinny, and that oy him she is about to become a mother.

Among other facts which led to this charge are the following:—Wood during last fall owned the place known as the Adams property, situated a short distance east of this city. He lived there with his daughter and the girl spoken of, the latter acting as servant. For reasons best known to herself the daughter compelled the servant girl to leave the house. Soon after the daughter got married and also leit. Wood, being alone, sent for the servant girl to come out and see him, which she did, and the two remained alone in the house all night. Some time after Mary McNinny, in the presence of wilnesses, confessed that she was enceme and charged Wood with being the lather of the cinid. Still later Wood and Mary took passage on the steamer John L. Hasbrouek from this city for New York, Teaving here at seven of clock in the evening. It is not known that they occupied one stateroom, but during the evening Wood was constantly by hary's side on a sofa, and also escorted her to supper.

by ary's side on a sofa, and also escorted her to supper.

All these reports induced the leading members of the church to summon Wood before them, when specific charges were made. He confessed the soft inopeaciment that he had been too intimate with the opposite sex, but demed that he was the father of Mary McNinny's child and offered his resignation. It was refused and steps were taken to secure his immediate expuision from the Society. Both he and the girl have left the city—the latter giving out that she was going to New York, and he stating that he was going to make a Southern tour, intending to return in a week or two.
